Metacommunity ecology studies how local and regional processes interact across scales to impact community dynamics. This seminar will explore the history of modeling within and among the four archetypes of metacommunity ecology, how empirical data from various study systems have informed model development, and the application of metacommunity models to other ecological topics (e.g. community assembly and succession, biodiversity and ecosystem function, response to global change and conservation).